an individual's life-blood, the group wrote in a media release. People naturally tend to impose personal and social perspectives on any new situation. A converted school bus is something of a status symbol, proof that you're really rooted in the scene.